Teaser	You can receive a pension from the statutory accident insurance again after a settlement upon application and under certain conditions.
Volltext	It may be possible to receive a settlement from the statutory accident insurance instead of a regular pension, i.e. a one-off payment. If your state of health worsens after you have been granted a settlement, you will again be entitled to a pension in full. This is called the resumption of the settled pension. The settlement amount paid will be credited against your pension. To receive a pension again, you must apply to your employers' liability insurance association or accident insurance fund.
Erforderliche Unterlagen	• Medical documents to prove the severely injured status • Documents relating to other insurance claims • Your employers' liability insurance association or accident insurance fund may tell you what else is needed.
Voraussetzungen	• You have received a settlement • After the settlement, you have become a severely injured person or a severely disabled person. This means your reduction in earning capacity has increased to at least 50 percent. • Your reduction in earning capacity has increased: as a result of a new insured event, for example, an accident at work, or due to an aggravation of the consequences
