Teaser	All distance learning courses require state approval before they are offered.
Volltext	Distance learning courses teach the subject matter exclusively or predominantly in physical separation between teachers and learners on a contractual basis for a fee, whereby the learning success is monitored. Distance learning is therefore highly individualized and can be freely scheduled. All distance learning courses require state approval before they are offered. The State Central Agency for Distance Learning (ZFU) examines distance learning courses with regard to their suitability for achieving the course objectives and with regard to compliance with consumer protection regulations for contract design and participant information.
