course. The course takes into account judicial, administrative and legal advisory practice, including the key qualifications required for this, e.g. dispute resolution. Practical study periods take place during the lecture-free period.

The legal traineeship lasts two years and consists of compulsory and optional stages. Compulsory stages are - an ordinary court in civil matters, - a court in criminal matters or the public prosecutor's office, - an administrative authority and - an attorney at law.

If desired, further training can also take place in other places where appropriate training is guaranteed, e.g. with a notary or in the legal department of a company, in Germany or abroad.

The so-called trainee lawyers are assigned to individual trainers during the legal preparatory service. The training is accompanied by working groups.

The second state examination in law consists of a written part (written examinations) and an oral part (examination interview, possibly a presentation). It covers the core areas of civil law, criminal law and public law, including procedural law. The tasks take into account the areas of activity of the courts and public prosecutor's offices as well as the legal profession.

A failed examination can be repeated once, in exceptional cases twice.

A passed examination can be repeated once to improve the grade.
