obtain access authorisation:

- As a rule, you apply for your background check together with the access authorisation. Unless you have already undergone an equivalent check.

If you apply for access authorisation in writing:

- You can obtain the form from your employer, the ID card office at the airport or download the form from the Internet (application for an airport ID card, application for a background check).
- In most cases, both applications are linked in one form.
- Complete the form pages and obtain confirmation from your employer. You can then submit the application to the airport operator yourself or have it submitted by your employer.
- The airport operator will check whether your application is necessary for operational reasons.
- The airport operator forwards the application for access authorisation and, if necessary, a background check to the aviation security authority.
- The aviation security authority will inform you of the result with a notification. Your employer and the airport operator will also be informed of the result, but will not receive a detailed explanation.
- If the result is positive and the airport operator also sees no grounds for obstruction, it will issue you with an airport ID card, provided the other requirements are met.
- You must appear in person to collect your airport ID card from the airport operator.
- Please note that the airport ID card is limited in time and is only valid for certain areas in the security zone of the airport.
- Please also note that the airport operator may revoke your access authorisation at a later date if there are reasons for doing so, for example, due to a background check.
