Teaser	Before you light a bonfire, you must either notify the authorities or obtain a permit, depending on the local regulations.
Volltext	Before you light a bonfire, you must either notify the authorities or obtain a permit, depending on the local regulations. As a rule, only an informal application is required to register a bonfire. However, this is handled differently in the municipalities; in some cases, more specific information and requirements are imposed on the bonfire.
Erforderliche Unterlagen	Depending on the respective regulations of the municipality, please inquire there.
Voraussetzungen	Depending on local law, fires may only be permitted for a specific occasion and at a specific time, e.g. Easter fires. Bonfires may also be generally prohibited in the vicinity of thatched houses or in spa areas. An organizer must be named who is responsible for compliance with the regulations (e.g. fire safety, registration of the event).
Kosten	Depending on the respective regulations of the municipality, please inquire there.

Hinweise	The wood used for the fire must not contain any environmentally harmful components. Suitable wood is natural; as a rule of thumb, only use wood that can be chopped and used for mulching or composting. Impregnated, varnished, painted or coated wood as well as chipboard, blockboard, glued wood etc. are not suitable. Other waste such as bulky waste or hazardous waste must also not be allowed to enter the fire. Fire residues should be spread over a large area on suitable surfaces. They should not be left collected at the site of the fire, as they impair soil fertility in excess. In case of doubt, they should be disposed of via the waste disposal system. In any case, ask the local authority about the relevant regulations.
