Volltext	The basis for practicing the veterinary profession is a successfully completed university degree in veterinary medicine. In addition, a separate professional license is required to use the professional title "veterinarian" in the Federal Republic of Germany and to practice the veterinary profession. This professional license is the Approbation. The requirements for obtaining a license to practice are laid down in the Federal Veterinary Code. If the requirements for the granting of a license to practice medicine in accordance with the Federal Veterinary Code are not met, the professional license can alternatively be granted by means of a permit to temporarily practice the veterinary profession. A permit for the temporary practice of the veterinary profession can be granted on application to persons who can provide evidence of having completed training for the veterinary profession. On this basis, the professional license can be granted for a maximum of 4 years. A further extension is only possible in a few special cases. With a few exceptions, this does not apply to nationals of a member state of the European Union, of another state party to the Agreement on the European Economic Area or of a state party to which Germany and the European Community or Germany and the European Union have granted a corresponding legal entitlement by treaty, who have acquired a
