Volltext	If you operate a traveling trade, you must generally comply with the provisions of the Shop Opening Act and the Act on the Protection of Sundays and Public Holidays. An exception to the Sunday and public holiday rest period applies to the offering (offering for sale) of goods and to catering activities in the itinerant trade. The exemptions also apply to self-employed tradespeople who visit other people in the course of their business. Further exemptions must be expressly approved by the competent authority upon application.

Hinweise	The Trade Regulation Act defines a traveling trade as an itinerant trade, for example the owner of a market stall, showman or "flying trader". You operate an itinerant trade if you offer goods or services commercially outside your commercial establishment or without having a commercial establishment without making an appointment in advance. To operate a traveling trade, you need a permit, the traveling trade card.
