Teaser	You can adopt not only a German child but also a foreign one. The family court decides on this and requires a notarised application.
Volltext	In the case of a national adoption, not only children with German but also with foreign citizenship can be adopted. Although it is an adoption with foreign contact of the child, the adoption order is pronounced by a German family court. The decisive factor in the adoption of a foreign child is that the parties involved (adoptive parents and adopted child) have their habitual residence in Germany.

Erforderliche Unterlagen	For an adoption procedure, the following documents are required in particular: • Notarized adoption application • Declarations of consent • Birth certificate of the child • Marriage certificate of the adopter • Certificates of nationality of the parties concerned • Registration certificates of the parties concerned • Health certificates of the parties involved • police clearance certificate of the adopter • Proof of income of the adopters The family court may request additional documents.
Voraussetzungen	The basic prerequisite for the adoption of a child is that it serves the best interests of the child and that the emergence of a parent-child relationship can be predicted. Minor adoption is only possible if the child is not yet 18 years old when the adoption is given. Further prerequisites are the ability of the adopters to be parents for this child, an appropriate adoption care period and the existence of the declarations of consent of the parties involved.
Kosten	There are costs for the notarization of the notarial application and the issuance of the documents.
Verfahrensablauf	The adoption requires a notarized application, which must be submitted to the family court. If the family court pronounces the adoption, the child acquires the legal status of a joint child of the adoptive parents. With the adoption order, the relationship of the child to his biological parents and relatives expires.
Bearbeitungsdauer	The processing time depends on the family court.
Frist	The application for adoption by minors should be submitted in good time before the child reaches the age of majority.
