Volltext	You can have land registers closed again if all condominium ownership rights have been combined in your person. The unification may have taken place because you have acquired all condominium ownership rights by legal transaction, inheritance or forced sale. You can also reverse the division if you have always remained the owner of all condominium rights after a division into condominiums because no other owners have joined the community. Your application is required for this. When the condominium land registers are closed, a new land register sheet is created for the property. Any encumbrances of all condominium ownership rights with a joint right will continue with the same content on the undivided property. If necessary, individual encumbrances are also transferred.
