Under certain conditions, donations can be taken into account in the context of income, corporation or trade taxation.

Volltext

Donations for the promotion of tax-privileged purposes can be deducted from the donor in total up to 20% of the total amount of income or 4‰ of the total turnover and wages and salaries spent in the calendar year within the framework of income, corporation or trade taxation. For this purpose, a donation receipt (previously donation receipt) issued by the recipient of the donation according to the officially prescribed form must be submitted to the tax office. Tax-privileged contributions include donations and, under certain conditions, membership fees, including levies and admission fees.

Donations are voluntary contributions in cash or in kind, which are provided without legal obligation and which do not constitute remuneration for consideration. Uses and services (e.g. free work for an association or the free provision of rooms or vehicles)
