this purpose, the importer has to register once and is activated by the competent authority.

- The animals are imported into Germany via a border control approved for the import of animals.
- All necessary veterinary examination and treatment certificates must be presented.

For export:

- The exporter is obliged to comply with the laws, regulations, standards and procedural and import regulations applicable in the importing country.
- This results in the obligation of the entrepreneur to procure the relevant current requirements of the third country, if necessary, and to submit them to the certification officer for examination.
- In the case of the export of animals, the animals must be inspected at the authority or on the spot by an official veterinarian. In this case, compliance with the requirements required for the third country must be certified.
- Certain third countries allow exports to their territory only from establishments that are already known there through prior registration or approval and have been included in corresponding lists of registered or approved establishments.
- Establishments that must register with the authorities of the third country and/or be officially listed are subject to official listing procedures. As a rule, officially confirmed export applications must be submitted for this purpose, in which in many cases compliance with the requirements specified by the third country must also be certified.
- After the applications have been examined by the authorities of the third country and, if necessary, the on-site inspection has been successfully carried out, the companies are approved and listed for export by the respective third country and can then export.
