Teaser	If you do not have sufficient assets to pay the costs of conducting insolvency proceedings, you (as a natural person) can apply for the deferral of the costs of the proceedings.
Volltext	When conducting insolvency proceedings, procedural costs are incurred, which can be considerable (see "Costs of insolvency proceedings"). Only if these costs are covered, insolvency proceedings with the possibility of obtaining discharge of residual debt can be opened. If you do not have sufficient assets or do not receive an advance on procedural costs from third parties, you can apply for deferral of the costs of the proceedings. In principle, your spouse is obliged to pay an advance on the costs of proceedings; only if your spouse is also incapacitated can a deferral of the costs of the proceedings be considered. The deferral means that you do not have to make any payments - usually until the discharge of residual debt has been granted. During the insolvency proceedings and until the end of the declaration of assignment, the deferred procedural costs must be paid primarily from the insolvency estate. If the costs of the proceedings have not yet been repaid or not fully repaid to the state treasury after the discharge of residual debt has been granted, instalments may be granted for a maximum of 48 months. The prerequisite for this is that you are not in a position to cover the outstanding procedural costs at once. The court may change its decision on the granting of

the deferral if your personal or economic circumstances relevant to the decision have changed significantly. Such a change must be notified to the court without delay. If you do not comply with this obligation despite a request from the court, the deferment may be lifted.

The court grants – provided that the conditions are met – the deferral separately for each stage of the proceedings. Stages of the proceedings are, in particular, the opening proceedings, the actual insolvency proceedings and the discharge of residual debt proceedings.

Erforderliche Unterlagen

- Application for the opening of insolvency proceedings
- Admissible application for discharge of residual debt
- Application for deferral of the costs of the proceedings with an attached declaration that there is no ground for refusal pursuant to § 290 sec. 1 no. 1 InsO. Such a reason exists if, in the five years preceding the application for the opening of insolvency proceedings or after this application, you have been finally sentenced to a fine of more than 90 daily rates or to imprisonment of more than three months for an offence under Sections 283 to 283c of the Criminal Code.
- The application for deferment must be accompanied by a statement of the assets, in particular of the amount of current income, of the current liabilities together with the corresponding supporting documents. The insolvency courts also provide forms for this declaration of personal and economic circumstances.

If an advance payment claim against the spouse under § 1360a sec. 4 BGB or life partner under § 5 LPartG comes into consideration, the application must contain statements on the spouse's ability to pay, the incurrance of the liabilities and the causes of the debt, so that the court can assess the question of the obligation to make advance payments (cf. BGH, decision of 24 July 2003 – IX ZB 539/02, juris para. 19) (We, 15/10)
