a declaration of admissibility or approval of dismissal before giving notice.

The following groups of people are subject to special protection against dismissal:

- Women during pregnancy, until the end of four months after a miscarriage after the 12th week of pregnancy and until the end of the protection period after childbirth, but at least until the end of four months after childbirth
- Employees on parental leave
- Persons who care for a relative in need of care or organize care during (family) care leave

The regulations on protection against dismissal vary.

Protection against dismissal for employees on parental leave begins as soon as the application is submitted. There is a special ban on dismissal 8 weeks before the start of parental leave if the child is under 3 years old, or 14 weeks before the start of parental leave if the child is between 3 and 8 years old.

In the case of (family) care leave, protection against dismissal already applies when the employer is notified that the employee will be unable to work. The protection applies for a maximum of 12 weeks before the announced start date.

Under the Maternity Protection Act, dismissal of a woman is not permitted during her pregnancy, until four months after a miscarriage after the twelfth week of pregnancy and until the end of her protection period after giving birth, but at least until four months after giving birth if the employer is aware of the pregnancy, the miscarriage after the twelfth week of pregnancy or the birth at the time of dismissal or if the employer is notified within two weeks of receipt of the dismissal.

The competent authority will only grant your consent if a verifiable reason for termination can be proven.
