Sachverhalt

The First State Examination is not organized and conducted by the university, but by the Bavarian State Ministry of Education and Cultural Affairs as a central, uniform state examination. Two examination dates are offered each year (examination date in spring and examination date in fall). The specific examination dates are published by the Bavarian State Ministry of Education and Cultural Affairs, e.g. on the website of the State Ministry (see "Related links").

The course of study for the teaching profession at vocational schools does not conclude with a centrally organized state examination. The first state examination for vocational schools corresponds to a diploma or master's examination for vocational or business teachers (within the scope of the Bavarian Teacher Training Act) if it meets the requirements of the teaching profession and evidence of at least one year of relevant professional practical training or completed relevant professional training is also provided. Diploma or Master's examinations are organized and conducted by the universities. However, the teaching profession at vocational schools can be extended to include additional subjects, special educational qualifications, psychology with a focus on school psychology and pedagogical qualifications through the first state examination in accordance with § 86 LPO I. You can find the link to the corresponding online registration form under "Online procedure".

Further school-specific information on the First Teaching Qualification Examination in Bavaria and the associated courses of study can be found on the relevant pages under "Related links".
