Teaser	The municipality publishes official announcements in the municipal gazette, among other places.
Volltext	The official gazette of your municipality is its official publication. In this publication, some of which can also be viewed on its website, you will find official announcements from the municipality, such as development plans, tax statutes and other local bylaws, as well as tenders and resolutions of the municipal council. If your municipality belongs to an administrative community and does not maintain its own official gazette, the official gazette of the administrative community is also considered to be the official gazette of the municipality. If your municipality does not have an official gazette, statutes must be officially published in the official gazette of the district or the district administration office, otherwise in regularly published printed works. However, official announcements of bylaws can also be made by posting them in the administration of the municipality and announcing the posting digitally via the Internet, by posting or displaying them in the places generally intended for public announcements (municipal notice boards), on a public website of the municipality or by notification in a daily newspaper.
