Teaser	If the child lives in a foster family as part of full-time care, the youth welfare office must ensure that the child receives the necessary maintenance. This is done by paying a care allowance.
Volltext	In the case of full-time care in accordance with Section 33 of Book Eight of the German Social Code (SGB VIII), foster families take a child whose family of origin has inadequate upbringing conditions into their family for a certain period of time or duration and care for and bring them up. Full-time foster care in accordance with Section 33 SGB VIII is an educational aid that is granted by the youth welfare office responsible for the case if it has been determined as appropriate in the context of the assistance plan procedure. If the youth welfare office places a child with a foster family, it undertakes to ensure the child's necessary upkeep by paying a foster allowance. The foster care allowance is determined by the respective youth welfare office. The foster care allowance is graded according to the age of the foster child and is made up of the amount for the costs of material expenses and the costs of care and upbringing. The amount for material costs is based on the expenses that have to be paid directly for the foster child, i.e. for food, clothing, rent, electricity, heating, school materials, pocket money, toys, contributions to sports clubs, etc. The costs of upbringing are a contribution to recognizing the special upbringing work of the foster carers.

Sachverhalt

The "Recommendations of the Bavarian Association of Counties and the Bavarian Association of Cities for full-time care in accordance with SGB VIII" (recommendation as of January 1, 2024) provide guidance on the amount of the care allowance:

- EUR 1,060 for age group 0 to the age of 6,
- EUR 1,202 for the age group 7 to the age of 12,
- EUR 1,390 from the age of 13.

If the caregiver is a direct relative of the child (grandparents, great-grandparents) and is able to provide maintenance for the child, the care allowance can be reduced appropriately with regard to material expenses. The minors and their parents will contribute to the costs according to their means in accordance with the regulations on cost contributions.

If necessary in individual cases, in addition to the monthly care allowance, an additional requirement for special care and/or a contribution for certain purchases can be made - for example for the initial equipment of the foster family, important personal occasions (e.g. baptism, first communion, confirmation) or vacation and vacation trips of the foster child.

The foster care allowance also includes an entitlement to reimbursement of proven expenses for contributions to accident insurance as well as half of the proven expenses for appropriate pension provision for the foster carer. These are reimbursed monthly in a lump sum. Foster parents should always speak to their local youth welfare office before concluding a corresponding insurance contract.

Child benefit for foster children is deducted from the current benefits in accordance with statutory regulations.
