Teaser	The intermediate examination takes place about halfway through your dual training period. This serves to determine the level of knowledge and is intended to give you and the training company feedback on the transfer of knowledge to date.
Volltext	The intermediate examination determines your acquired skills, knowledge and abilities as well as the subject matter from the vocational school lessons. The exam should give you and your training company an impression of your respective level of performance. Participation in the intermediate examination is a prerequisite for admission to the final examination.

Sachverhalt

The results of the intermediate examination provide you with important information as to whether you want to be admitted to the final examination early. The intermediate exams consist of a written part and, if necessary, another practical part. Both parts of the examination are usually examined on different days. The written part of the exam is conducted nationwide on a fixed day at the same time. If you have concluded an apprenticeship contract with a company, this apprenticeship relationship has been reported to the responsible regional office (e.g. Chamber of Industry and Commerce). The competent authority knows the period in which you have to take your intermediate examination. They will notify you of the exam in a letter or electronically. The implementation of the intermediate examination is organized by the responsible regional office in consultation with the honorary examination board. The examination board, consisting of employer representatives, employee representatives and teacher representatives, takes your examination performance and evaluates it. The examination result determined by the examination board is transmitted to the responsible body. You will receive the results in the form of a certificate of participation. Intermediate examinations only take place in occupations in which the training regulations do not provide for a final examination in two parts. Participation in intermediate examinations is compulsory for all trainees. You can omit an intermediate examination if you have already completed another training course of at least two years that has been credited to your training relationship. Upon request, you can also take an intermediate examination as a retraining participant, but then you or the person responsible for the measure must bear the costs for the examination.
