Teaser	If you want to give your child up for adoption and you are not married to the mother, you can refrain from filing a petition to transfer parental care to yourself after the child is born.
Volltext	In order for a child to be given up for adoption, the consent of both parents is required. This consent can usually only be given eight weeks after the birth of the child. If the mother is not married, you as the father, if you do not have custody, can give consent to the adoption even before the child is born. This consent must be notarized. Consent to adoption cannot be notarized at a youth welfare office. In addition, the father can make a declaration that he will not apply for parental care of the child. This declaration supplementing the consent must be notarized "publicly." "Public" means that the declaration can also be notarized. However, the declaration can also be notarized (in this case free of charge) at a youth welfare office, for example. Both when notarizing the consent to an adoption and when notarizing the declaration of relinquishment, you will be informed about the legal consequences and effects of the notarization before it is notarized.
Erforderliche Unterlagen	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Proof of identity Identity must be proven for the certification. You must therefore be able to identify yourself with an ID card, passport or comparable documents. • Proof of paternity Birth certificate of the child, either with father's entry or father's acknowledgment plus mother's confirmation of paternity.

Voraussetzungen	You must be the father of the child. If paternity has not yet been legally established, you must be able to credibly prove that you are the child's father. For example, the mother could confirm that only you can be considered as the child's father.
Kosten	The notarial certification incurs costs in accordance with the applicable schedule of fees. The notary's office can inform you of the exact amount of the costs before the notarization. The public notarization of the waiver before the notary of a youth welfare office is free of charge.
Verfahrensablauf	You must prove that you are the father of the child. A birth certificate of the child in which you are registered as the father can serve as proof. If the child has not yet been born, you must provide prima facie evidence that you are the child's father (see Requirements). The same applies if your paternity has not yet been legally established after the birth of the child. The person recording the deed will inform you about the legal effect of the deed. An appointment is required for the notarization at the Youth Welfare Office. The certificate is then sent to the family court. The consent or waiver becomes effective as soon as the deed is received by the family court. Both the consent and the waiver are irrevocable. This means that even if you change your mind, you cannot withdraw from the notarized declarations.
Bearbeitungsdauer	The necessary legal instructions and questions that you may wish to clarify before notarization require a time commitment that differs in each individual case. In addition, there may be a waiting period on site. It is advisable to make an appointment for the notarization.
Frist	The father who is not married to the mother can only have a waiver of the transfer of custody notarized after the birth of the child. In contrast, the father who is not married to the mother and does not have custody
